COLEMAN VICARY CREEK MINE RE-OPENS

D. B. Young, general manager of Coleman Collieries, announced last week that work was underway opening up the road in order that workmen could begin operations at the Vicary Creek mine.

The mine, some 12 miles north of Coleman, produces one of the highest grades of coking coal available.

Men from the Collieries' McGillivray mine operation at Coleman, will be transferred to Vicary Creek to start preparatory work there immediately and it is expected that within one month some 60 men will be working in two eight-hour shifts producing some 500 to 600 tons of coal per shift.

The Vicary mine was opened last year and coal from the mine will be stockpiled until August, after which it will be cleaned, loaded and shipped to Japan by Nippon Steel Company, Kokan KK Steel & Tube Company, Yawata Iron and Steel Company, and Nakayama Steel Co.,

all in the vicinity of Tokyo.

The coal is being shipped through the ports of Seattle and Portland through the co-operation of Ottawa since the docks at Vancouver are not yet ready for bulk loading.

Opening of the Vicary Creek mine together with 35,000 ton order for coking coal obtained from Japan by Coleman Collieries, will add some $25,000 per month to the economy of Coleman.

Mr. Young also stated that the Collieries would commence immediate construction of a wash house and lamp house for the underground Vicary mine.

The Collieries' McGillivray mine has been working steadily for the past few months.

Heavy Snow Blankets Pass

Some eight inches of snow blanketed the ground in the Crows Nest Pass district Thursday of last week and temperatures dropped to near the zero mark, as winter took its last bite of the season in the district.

With a fairly stiff east wind blowing snow drifted around the district causing much grief to motorists who had already removed their winter tires from cars and trucks.

Highways turned into slushy hazardous roads and traffic moved very slowly during the day.

Overshows, winter coats and ear muffs were brought out of mothballs and some residents shivered atoms as winter coats had been sent away for dry cleaning before being stored until next season.

Birds in the district were seen all over the Pass seeking shelter in barns and coal sheds to get away from the wintry weather.

Early spring flowers that were already well on their way to blooming were being covered by home-owners in an attempt to keep the buds from freezing.

They expect to arrive back in Coleman by the end of May.

Mr., Mrs. D. Young To Visit Switzerland

Mr. and Mrs. Dave B. Young of Coleman, left town last Friday for Calgary, where they boarded an airplane for a trip abroad.

The couple will spend a short visit in London and then proceed to Geneva, Switzerland, where they will spend two weeks. Mr. Young will attend the International Labor Organization Conference (7th session) to be held from April 27 to May 8th.

After their stay in Switzerland they will proceed to Scotland where they will visit Mr. Young's brother and a number of Mrs. Young's relatives.

They expect to arrive back in Coleman by the end of May.

The 12th anniversary of the Past Chiefs' Association, Pythian Sisters of Coleman, was celebrated with a delicious turkey banquet in the Grand Union Hotel, Coleman, on Wednesday, April 15th at 6:30 p.m.

H

The Story Behind The Drug

In 1942, world production of penicillin was just enough to treat about 400 patients and the cost, needless to say, was almost prohibitive.

But within 10 years North American drug manufacturers alone were turning out enough penicillin each year to treat more than 550,000,000 persons and the cost of an average dose had dropped some 99 per cent. But to bring the cost down the pharmaceutical industry had to spend an estimated $20,000,000 — a like amount was spent to make Salk vaccine available — to find ways to mass produce penicillin so that it would be within the reach of millions of people at a reasonable price.

Fantastic? Not to the pharmaceutical industry which takes in $160 million a year, but to the consumer the fact that millions of dollars and many years of research must be spent before a new drug is ready. And, contrary to a popularly held belief, today's "wonder drugs" have actually drastically reduced the cost of being sick.

Pneumonia is a classic example. A few years ago a serious case of pneumonia meant weeks in the hospital with, at the outset, constant nursing attendance, and further weeks of convalescence at home. The mortality rate was also extremely high. Before the victim died, he survived, was back on his feet within days and has returned to work within a couple of weeks. The cost; no more, on the average, than $50 for the drugs and perhaps another couple of hundred for less of wages, medical charges and other out-of-pocket expenses.

More important, the victim's chances of surviving are far greater today; largely due to the wonder drugs, the mortality rate for pneumonia has dropped 61 per cent.

In a way, the name "wonder drug" is a misnomer. It connotes something springing suddenly from nothing out of nowhere. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Every so-called "wonder" or "miracle" drug in existence today is the result of many years of patient research and experimentation and the expenditure of many millions of dollars. In one instance 55 scientists spent nearly three years and $400,000 screening 100,000 soil samples in order to find just one broad-spectrum anti-biotic. One company alone spent $500,000 studying folic acid vitamins, which at that time had no commercial value. Another manufacturer screened 5,000 compounds before finally discovering isomazid, used to fight tuberculosis.

The very foundation of pharmaceutical manufacturing is this constant development and research. It is not unusual for a company to spend years and hundreds of thousands of dollars only to find that the drug is obsolete by the time it is ready for the medical market.

And even when a new drug is produced on a commercial basis, further research is embarked upon to see what other improvements can be made.

It is estimated that North American pharmaceutical companies last year spent more than $140,000,000 on research and development. Nor is this out of line when it is remembered that it costs around $75,000 a year to pay and equip just one pharmaceutical scientist.

In addition to research and development, one of the major problems is that of finding a means of producing a drug in order to make it available in quantity. The discovery of the pharmaceutical in the laboratory is only half the battle. Equally important is the discovery of ways and means of producing rapidly and in quantity so that it will be available to every doctor in Canada just as fast as possible.

It is no exaggeration to say that in the past two decades, more drugs and other pharmaceutical preparations have been made available to the medical profession than were known since the dawn of history.

If this seems almost unbelievable, it is a matter of record that approximately 400 new pharmaceutical preparations are offered commercially in Canada each year.

And this represents only those preparations which have passed the most exacting tests and have been approved by both the medical professions and government health agencies. Hundreds of others require further study and investigation or are set aside to await the time when new scientific discoveries and advances will enable researchers to complete their investigatory studies and add still another new pharmaceutical to the growing number that are helping to prolong life, fight disease and illness and alleviate suffering.

Of Many Things

Keeping 'Em Breathing!

This is a serious tribute to the medical profession, but I can't resist beginning it with the gag about a newspaper reporter who asked an old gent for the secret of longevity, and was given the priceless answer, "Just keep breathing, son—keep breathing."

Inability to breathe freely is no joke, as thousands of asthmatics will tell you, and that's why I want to pay tribute right now to the medical doctors who have been encouraging an experiment full of promise for those who suffer from bronchial asthma.

The experiment began in — of all places — the Montreal Forum, scene of a Saturday night hockey broadcast.

Hockey players are desperate if anything goes amiss with the functioning of their breathing apparatus. Plante, for example, had a long struggle with his breathing. Goyette, and even boom-boom Geoffrion had breathing problems.

Fortunately, the famous Canadiens had a physiotherapist superbly skillful in the art of keeping 'em breathing.

Fortunately, too, Montreal had a medical doctor who sometimes watched hockey. This doctor had an asthmatic patient, a problem patient over whom he had been worrying. Perhaps the physiotherapist who kept those players going could help a man with asthma. The doctor decided to try it.

That was five years ago.

That was the beginning of an experiment. Bill Head, the physiotherapist, with the supervision and encouragement of the medical doctor (and soon other doctors, too, were sending patients and helping in the development of the method), found that his skill in manipulating the rib cage of an athlete could be used to help asthmatics, sometimes dramatically, nearly always considerably. Soon the patient is able to take over and do his or her own exercises to maintain the blessed relief.

So, only sports writers, interested doctors and some one hundred relieved patients have known about this exciting work. Doctors are traditionally shy of publicity, and Bill Head, a trained physiotherapist, but not a medical doctor, will need medical sponsorship and the facilities of a medical school or university if his mechanical treatment for bronchial asthma is to come into widespread use.

I have a notion that the sponsorship and the facilities will soon become available. Canadian doctors and the Canadian people have a reputation for sponsoring progress in any area where health is concerned.

Most people pay too much for the things they get for nothing.

Unless a man is doing all he can be doing less than he should.

SOCIALIST EGGS

About five years ago, Socialist M.P. and one-time parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food in England, lambasted the Tory government for decontrolling eggs. The Tories had swept away the ration and the priority rights.

This, said the Socialists, would mean that eggs would become a luxury only the rich could enjoy. "We are likely to have fewer eggs at higher prices," prophesied Mr. Willey. It was a "Tory sell-out of the housewife," he said.

Now, five years later, everybody in England can have ham and eggs for breakfast, without giving it a second thought. Instead of an egg a week, enjoyed under the old government-planned regime, even a poorer family can afford eggs every day. The price is cheaper, the product more plentiful. In other words, things turned out exactly the opposite to what the Socialists proclaimed so bitterly.

Indeed, if there is a problem now, it is a problem of abundance rather than scarcity. This the Socialists cannot just understand.

They had declared, when controls were stopped, that it would put eggs "out of the reach of many young children, invalids and expectant mothers, who had guaranteed priorities under rationing and are now abandoned under the decontrol. Decontrol will not create any more eggs."

They are proven wrong.

What they should have recognized was that control, which they practised, did not control any eggs. Controls limit, restrict and inhibit producers. Decontrol - the setting free of the product - did for invalids, expectant mothers, and everybody, what rationing could not do. It lowered the price, it brought abundance rather than scarcity.

This same dynamic impetus of freedom has been demonstrated so often you would think everybody would be convinced. Yet the Socialists, time and again, sell themselves the notion that a group in London, or Washington, or Ottawa, can plan production so well that they can legislate us into prosperity. The fact is, we plan best when each interested individual does the planning - and suffers for his mistakes or gains by his wisdom.

Wisdom is something governments seem to toss out the window when they get involved in matters concerning food. In Manitoba, for example, housewives are allowed to buy margarine but they must color it themselves; it is against the law for the manufacturer to color it for them. Yet it is a food product listed for use in Canada's official Good Health Rules!

How ridiculous can you get?

In Canada there are strict laws to keep manufacturers from getting together on marketing plans; but at the same time, there is special marketing legislation which compels many farmers against their will to engage in such plans in the marketing of food products.

What a weird and wonderful world!

$250.00 Creative Writing Scholarship To Be Awarded

The Calgary Branch of the Canadian Women's Press Club announced recently that their second Creative Writing Scholarship to the value of $250.00 will be awarded at the Banff School of Fine Arts for the 1959 session.

This Creative Writing Scholarship Competition is open to all women who are residents of Alberta, from Red Deer south to the U.S. border, and who are 18 years of age or over. All fields of creative writing are included and the club is anticipating several radio and television scripts, as well as newspaper and magazine articles, essays and poetry. The C.W.P.C. points out, however, that this scholarship is not limited to professional writers and work submitted need not necessarily have been broadcast or published. The purpose of the scholarship - the largest presently offered at the Banff School of Fine Arts - is to encourage and assist any writer showing unusual talent.

The Calgary branch C.W.P.C. Creative Writing Scholarship was established with funds raised by the club's second annual "Hemline Headlines" fashion show, held last October in the Jubilee Auditorium.

Entries close on May 31, 1959, and the winner will be announced on June 15th.

The following rules cover the Calgary branch, Canadian Women's Press Club's Creative Writing Scholarship competition:

1—Each entrant is asked to submit three samples of her work, in any field of creative writing.

2—Each entry must be accompanied by two letters of recommendation.

3—Each entry must be accompanied by the writer's name and address.

4—Entries should be double-spaced, preferably type-written. Handwritten entries will be accepted, however. No manuscripts can be returned.

5—All entries shall be mailed to Mrs. Keith Kilmore care of The Canadian Hereford Digest, 433 - 4th Avenue S.W., Calgary.

6—Entries close on May 31, 1959.

In the event that no entry is deemed worthy of this scholarship it will be held in abeyance by the Calgary branch, Canadian Women's Press Club.

Leaves of Gold

There are friends we meet
On the road of life,
Such as we all have known
Who turn aside when the way is rough

And leave us to journey alone

But the friend who's true
And who sees us through
With a friendly smile . . .
That's the friend worth while.
And I'll strive to be that kind of a friend.

Salvation Army Red Shield Appeal

"Completely unprecedented" expansion of Salvation Army facilities in Canada was reported by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, P.C., the chairman of The Salvation Army's National Advisory Board when announcing the $2,484,844 national objective of the 1939 Annual Red Shield Appeal scheduled for the month of May.

Mr. Meighen described the 1939 objective as "a minimum necessity in order to maintain existing facilities and services."

The Canadian public would be asked duly to meet the deficit on such operations.

"Increased services, however, can only increase maintenance costs," Mr. Meighen declared. The Salvation Army has achieved remarkable success in its expansion program, he stated, and the Canadian public will make certain that the 1939 Red Shield Appeal will be "an unqualified success", so that these services, vitally needed, will be adequately supported.
